PREFACE

Fort Myers is a delightful town of the sub-tropical district of Florida. That it is more tropical than the districts farther north is shown by the size of its palms. It lies four hundred miles farther south than the southern limits of California and is the most southerly city on the Gulf Coast of the United States. There are fifty-three varieties of palms, many lawns bedecked with red and pink hibiscus, purple bogainvillea, golden alamanda and orange flame vine or bigonia. The streets are lined with royal palms and shaded with royal poincianas, making it truly a regal city. Citrus groves provide shade as well as fruit and cover the entire populated area of the city.

The water is absolutely pure, both chemically and physically, coming from flowing wells of more than six hundred feet depth.

While Fort Myers is not a large city, the permanent population being approximately five thousand, it is the western terminus of a great cross-state waterway from the east coast and is destined in a very few years to become one of the four leading cities commercially in the state.

The waters adjacent to Fort Myers furnish the best tarpon fishing in the United States, while such other fish as red fish, Spanish mackerel, snappers and sea bass provide excellent sport at all seasons of the year as well as a basis of a most important industry. Fishermen and sportsmen from all over the world regularly visit Fort Myers to enjoy their favorite pastime.

The hotels of the city have an aggregate of more than one thousand rooms and are conducted in a most satisfactory manner and at unusually reasonable rates.

The city has a graded school system comprising grades from kindergarten to senior high school. The schools are housed in two commodious brick buildings and the bungalow school system of having a home for each grade has been adopted.

Lee County is the largest in area in the state, having more than four thousand square miles of territory, less than one per cent. of which is in cultivation. In addition to citrus crops, of which the yield is about one-half million boxes per year, stock growing, truck farming and staple field crops are profitable.

Many distinguished citizens of the United States have their homes here, among whom are Thomas A. Edison and Henry Ford, the former spending many weeks each winter in Fort Myers, and the latter coming at irregular intervals.

The eighteen hole golf course recently completed is said to be one of the sportiest in the country, it having been designed by Donald J. Ross, of Pinehurst, N. C.

The Fort Myers Board of Trade is the operating medium of public sentiment in the community and is always ready to answer any inquiries which may be submitted. A letter or postal card will bring to the writer detailed information about this most charming community.
